

Help a Friend Find Their iPhone in Seconds

By Olena Kagui September 15, 2025

What to Know

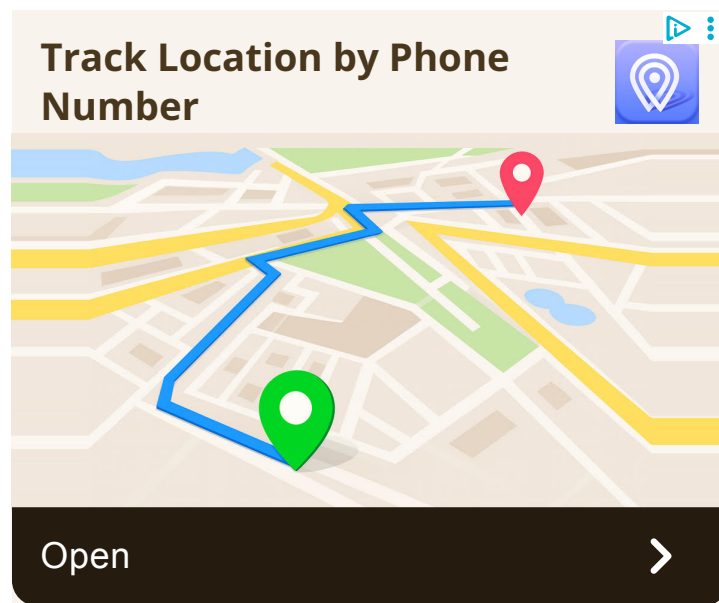

- To find someone else's iPhone, log in to the Help a Friend feature in your Find My app.
- Using Help a Friend bypasses two-factor authentication so you don't have to enter a passcode on the lost device.
- Once your friend logs in with their Apple Account, you can track the lost iPhone and enable Lost Mode.

So, how do you find someone else's iPhone? While the iPhone Find My app is most commonly used to locate your own devices, you can also find someone else's iPhone using the Help a Friend feature. Below, we'll cover how to use Find My iPhone for a friend.

How to Find an iPhone for a Friend

You can find a friend's iPhone (or find your own iPhone from someone else's iPhone) by signing into the Help a Friend feature within the Find My app. This feature, which opens in your web browser, bypasses two-factor authentication so that your friend can find their device quickly. If you try to open Find My in a web browser without using the Help a Friend feature, you'll need to enter a unique six-digit code that is sent to the lost device.

FAQ

- How can I help a friend find an iPhone that is turned off?

A dead or turned off phone is still trackable as long as the lost iPhone has iOS 15 or later and Find My is enabled. Otherwise, you'll be shown the last known location of your iPhone. Here's how to find a dead iPhone.

- How do I find someone else's dead iPhone?

If the lost iPhone is dead, you can see the last known location but not the current location. (This is true as long as you left Send Last Location enabled when you set up Find My.) Find My will continue to show your iPhone's last known location for seven days in the Find My app and 24 hours on iCloud.com.

- How can I find an offline iPhone?

If the lost iPhone is offline, the Find My app can still find the lost iPhone's current location using nearby Apple devices. So as long as other Apple devices are nearby, you will be able to track it.

- Can you enable Find My iPhone from another device?

Unfortunately, no. You must enable Find My on your iPhone or other devices before it goes missing.
